KICKING A YANKEE.

A very handsome friend of ours, who a few weeks ago was poked out of a comfortable office up the river, has betaken himself to Bangor, for a time, to recover from the wound inflicted upon his feelings by our "unprincipled and immolating administration."

Change of air must have had an instant effect upon his spirits, for, from Galena, he writes us an amusing letter, which, among other things, tells of a desperate quarrel that took place on board of the boat between a real live dandy tourist, and a real live yankee settler. The last trod on the toes of the former; whereupon the former threatened to "kick out of the cabin" the latter.

"You'll kick me out of this cabin?"
 "Yes, sir, I'll kick you out of this cabin!"
 "You'll kick me, Mr. Hitchcock, out of this cabin?"
 "Yes, sir, I'll kick you, Mr. Hitchcock!"
 "Well, I guess," said the yankee, very coolly, after being perfectly satisfied that it was himself who stood in such imminent peril of assault—"I guess, since you talk of kicking, you've never heard me tell about old Brady and my mare, there, to him?"

"No, sir, nor do I wish —"

"Wal, guess it won't set you back much, any how, as kicking's generally best to be considered on. You see old Brady is one of these sanctimonious, long faced hypocrites, who put on a religious suit every Sabbath morning, and with a good deal of screwing manage to keep it on till after sermon in the morning; and as I was a Universalist, he allers picked me out as a subject for religious conversation—and the darned hypocrite would talk about hell and the devil—the crucifixion and prayer, without ever winking. Wal, he had an old roan mare that would jump any fourteen rail fence in Illinois, and open any door in any barn that hadn't a padlock on it. Two or three times I found her in my stable, and I told Brady about it and he was 'very sorry'—an unruly animal'—would watch her, and a hull lot of such things, all said in a very serious manner, with a face twice as long as old Deacon Farrar's on Sacrament day. I knew all the time he was lying, and so I watched him and his old roan tu; and for three nights regular, old roan came to my stable about bed time, and just at day-light Brady would come, bridle her and ride off. I then just took my old mare down to a blacksmith's shop, and had some shoes made with 'corks' about four inches long, and had 'em nailed to her hind feet. Your heels, mister, ain't nothing to 'em. I took her home, give her about ten feet halt, and tied her right in the centre of the stable, fed her well with oats about nine o'clock, and after taking a good smoke went to bed, knowing that my old mare was a truth telling animal, and that she'd give a good report of herself in the morning. I hadn't got fairly to sleep before the old 'oman haunched me and wanted to know what on airth was the matter out at the stable. Says I, go to sleep, Peggy, it's nothing but 'Kate'—she's kicking off flies, I guess! Purty soon she hunched me agin, and says she, 'Mr. Hitchcock, du git up and see what in the world is the matter with Kate, for she is kicking most powerfully.' 'Lay still, Peggy—Kate will take care of herself, I guess.' Wal, the next morning, about day-light, Brady, with bridle in hand, cum to the stable, and, as true as the book of Genesis, when he saw the old roan's sides, starn, and head, he cursed and swore worse than you did, when I came down on your toes. After breakfast that morning, Joe Davis cum to my house, and says he 'Brady's old roan is nearly dead—she's cut to pieces and can scarcely move.' 'I want to know,' says I, 'how on airth did it happen?' Now, Joe Davis was a member of the same church with Brady, and while we were talking, up cum that everlastin' hypocrite, and says he, Mr. Hitchcock, my old roan is ruined!' 'Du tell,' says I. 'She is cut all to pieces,' says he; 'do you know whether she was in your stable, Mr. Hitchcock, last night?' Wal, Mister, with this I let out: 'Do I know it?—(the Yankee here, in illustration, made a sudden advance upon the dandy, who made way for him unconsciously, as it were)—Do I know it, you no-souled, shad-bellied, squash-headed, old night-owl you?—you hay-hookin', corn-cribbin', fodder-fudgin', cent-shavin', whittling-of-nothing you! Kate kicks like a mere dumb beast, but I've reduced the thing to a science! The Yankee had not ceased to advance, or the dandy, in his astonishment, to retreat; and now, the motion of the latter accelerated by an apparent demonstration on the part of the former to 'suit the action to the word,' he found himself in the 'social hall,' tumbling backward over a pile of baggage, and tearing the knees of his pants as he scrambled up, a perfect scream of laughter stunning him from all sides. The defeat was total; a few moments afterwards he was seen dragging his own trunk ashore, while Mr. Hitchcock finished his story on the boiler-deck.
